Brenda never thought it could happen to her. She had a successful career, was supporting her three kids, and even had money in savings. Then Brenda got sick and eventually couldn't work any longer. She lost her source of income, her medical benefits, and eventually her savings. She couldn't pay her rent or feed the kids and ended up living on the street. Fortunately, Brenda got connected with a United Way funded program that helped her get back up on her feet. The program helped her find medical treatment, housing and resources needed to get a job that she could do from home while she recovered.

United Way of the Columbia-Willamette helps more than 100,000 people like Brenda each year. We are working to advance the common good by focusing on the building blocks we all need to succeed: education, income and health. At United Way, we research the needs of the community, invest in the most effective programs, and work with partners who are committed to collaboration and measurable results.
