

Partnership for Impact:

Labor's Community Service Agency & United Way of the Columbia-Willamette

(LCSA members at UWCW service event)

For over 45 years, Labor's Community Service Agency (LCSA) and United Way of the Columbia-Willamette (UWCW) have been working together to make our region a better place for kids and families.

2020 has been an especially challenging year for many families who have been impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic and wildfires.

Throughout the last four decades, your local United Way has stood beside Labor and helped over 15,000 Union families meet their basic needs during a time of crisis, including assisting with rent, utilities, food, and guidance through displacements from disasters.

LCSA members providing resources for COVID-19 relief

Over the last five years, LCSA and UWCW together have:

- Donated toys to 2,000 children at LCSA's holiday giving party for Union and community families
- Provided holiday meal assistance to 1,000 families who were struggling with unemployment
- Trained a dozen Unions on how to more effectively serve their membership during a time of crisis through active listening skills and 211 community resources
- Educated over 2,000 youth on union living wage jobs as potential career paths
- Served over 700 families with $125,000 in COVID relief assistance
